Distributed Training and Rural Health Professions Education Roger Peter Strasser, Julian Wright, Mohamed Elhassan Abdalla , Julia Blitz, Jana Vera Muller , Lachlan Van Schaik, 2026-01-12 Distributed health professions education also referred to as decentralized training in the medical education literature is rapidly being adopted by academic institutions where clinical training occurs at sites outside of the tertiary academic hospitals Often distributed education enhances exposure to social determinants of health accommodates an increasing number of students encourages the social accountability of students and provides opportunity for work integrated learning and service learning opportunities Socially accountable distributed learning often involves community engagement based on interdependent partnerships between communities academic institutions health service delivery organizations and health professionals There is evidence to support the value of distributed training as it relates to improved service delivery and patient satisfaction at the training sites increased interest and opportunity for professional development of clinical teachers involved in students training and improved opportunities for interprofessional education Distributed education includes rural health professions education and should be considered as such for the remainder of this call Distributed

training also includes the majority of longitudinal integrated clerkships which are growing in health professions education globally Education and training of healthcare professionals involving place based distributed training poses particular challenges due to distance from the urban academic institutions limited local human resources and variable information technology availability These challenges can include access to training materials and lectures limitations to clinical supervision and challenges with social integration of students in the environment But there are also benefits to training healthcare professionals on the distributed training platform especially for extended periods of time which include students understanding of integration into and contribution to the health care system Students often report feeling part of the health care team and report a greater sense of responsibility in the management of their patients Health professions education should be adapted for application on the distributed training platform as proposed by available literature however each context is unique and presents various opportunities and challenges Insight into distributed training innovations adopted by institutions can influence the way distributed training is initiated customized and implemented across the globe This collection will consider all aspects of distributed training and the education of health professionals in order to increase understanding of both the challenges and the benefits to this model of training We aim to encourage discussion around new approaches or adaptations to under and post graduate distributed education from low middle and high income countries globally Specific areas of interest include but are not limited to Opportunities and challenges of distributed training Practical considerations for the implementation of distributed training including case studies Benefits and challenges specific to the training of students professional development and satisfaction of rural healthcare professionals Innovative approaches to health professions education specific to distributed training in a variety of contexts Approaches to improving the education or professional development of rural healthcare professionals Innovations in interprofessional education and collaborative practice on the distributed training platform Community engagement that supports co creation co development co delivery and co evaluation of distributed education Place based research involving health professionals learners health service delivery organizations and communities All article types are welcome to this Research Topic please find more information about these here Please note that all submitted manuscripts undergo our rigorous peer review process and Article Processing Charges apply upon acceptance APCs vary with article type more information here or contact medicine submissions@frontiersin.org with any questions Topic Editor Julia Blitz is a part time employee of iheed Training Limited All other Topic Editors declare no conflicts of interest

Investing in the Health and Well-Being of Young Adults National Research Council, Institute of Medicine, Board on Children, Youth, and Families, Committee on Improving the Health, Safety, and Well-Being of Young Adults, 2015-01-27 Young adulthood ages approximately 18 to 26 is a critical period of development with long lasting implications for a person's economic security health and well being Young adults are key contributors to the nation's workforce and military services and since many are parents to the healthy development of the next generation

Although millennials have received attention in the popular media in recent years young adults are too rarely treated as a distinct population in policy programs and research. Instead they are often grouped with adolescents or more often with all adults. Currently the nation is experiencing economic restructuring, widening inequality, a rapidly rising ratio of older adults, and an increasingly diverse population. The possible transformative effects of these features make focus on young adults especially important. A systematic approach to understanding and responding to the unique circumstances and needs of today's young adults can help to pave the way to a more productive and equitable tomorrow for young adults in particular and our society at large. Investing in The Health and Well Being of Young Adults describes what is meant by the term young adulthood, who young adults are, what they are doing, and what they need. This study recommends actions that nonprofit programs and federal, state, and local agencies can take to help young adults make a successful transition from adolescence to adulthood. According to this report, young adults should be considered as a separate group from adolescents and older adults. Investing in The Health and Well Being of Young Adults makes the case that increased efforts to improve high school and college graduate rates and education and workforce development systems that are more closely tied to high demand economic sectors will help this age group achieve greater opportunity and success. The report also discusses the health status of young adults and makes recommendations to develop evidence-based practices for young adults for medical and behavioral health, including preventions. What happens during the young adult years has profound implications for the rest of the life course, and the stability and progress of society at large depends on how any cohort of young adults fares as a whole. Investing in The Health and Well Being of Young Adults will provide a roadmap to improving outcomes for this age group as they transition from adolescence to adulthood.
