Fibershed is a story of vision persistence and kindness With patience and grace Rebecca has restored a sense of gratitude for the overlooked grasses and herbaceous plants that were once our second skin From the living world around her she has stitched together the broken strands of textile arts creating an economy of place where makers are artists and clothing is revered Paul Hawken author of Carbon A new farm to closet vision for the clothes we wear by a leader in the movement for local textile economies There is a major disconnect between what we wear and our knowledge of its impact on land air water labor and human health Even those who value access to safe local nutritious food have largely overlooked the production of fiber dyes and the chemistry that forms the backbone of modern textile production While humans are 100 percent reliant on their second skin it's common to think little about the biological and human cultural context from which our clothing derives Almost a decade ago weaver and natural dyer Rebecca Burgess developed a project focused on wearing clothing made from fiber grown woven and sewn within her bioregion of North Central California As she began to network with ranchers farmers and artisans she discovered that even in her home community there was ample raw material being grown to support a new regional textile economy with deep roots in climate change prevention and soil restoration A vision for the future came into focus combining right livelihoods and a textile system based on economic justice and soil carbon enhancing practices Burgess saw that we could create viable supply chains of clothing that could become the new standard in a world looking to solve the climate crisis In Fibershed readers will learn how natural plant dyes and fibers such as wool cotton hemp and flax can be grown and processed as part of a scalable restorative agricultural system They will also learn about milling and other technical systems needed to make regional textile production possible Fibershed is a resource for fiber farmers ranchers contract grazers weavers knitters slow fashion entrepreneurs soil activists and conscious consumers who want to join or create their own fibershed and topple outdated and toxic systems of exploitation Threads Magazine ,1995 The Guild ,1994
