Economies In Transition Comparing Asia:

Economies in Transition Wing Thye Woo, Stephen Parker, Jeffrey Sachs, 1997 In 1994 the Asia Foundation's Center for Asian Pacific Affairs began a two year project to compare the transitions of selected East European and Asian economies from centrally planned communist systems to market economies The goal was to shed light on the transition process through an understanding of the underlying economic and institutional dynamics This volume is the culmination of that project The volume is divided into three parts In the first part an overview the editors review the authors findings and highlight major themes The second part looks closely at the transition process in seven Asian and East European economies China Vietnam Mongolia Russia Poland Hungary and the Czech Republic The third part contains six comparative studies that explore key elements of the transition process The papers incorporate feedback obtained from meetings with cabinet members and high government officials conferences and seminars in Prague Ho Chi Minh City Hanoi Beijing Ulan Bator and Washington D C Contributors Leszek Balcerowicz Barbara Blaszczyk Peter Boone Yuan Zheng Cao Bruce Comer Marek Dabrowski Georges de Menil Daniel C Esty Gang Fan Boris Federov Roman Frydman Carol Graham Stephen Parker Andrzej Rapaczynski James Riedel Jeffrey D Sachs Baavaa Tarvaa Vinod Thomas Gavin Tritt Adiya Tsend Enkhbold Tsendjav Joel Turkewitz Narantsetseg Unenburen Yan Wang Wing Thye Woo

Economic Developments in Contemporary China Ian Jeffries, 2010-07-23 China's role in global affairs today continues to rise This book provides an authoritative comprehensive and detailed overview of contemporary economic developments in China Key topics include agriculture the market gradually replacing central planning the global financial crisis the reform of state owned industrial enterprises the non state sectors the open door policy including the WTO exchange rate policy and inward and outward direct foreign investment and China's economic performance in general The book continues and adds to the overview of developments up to May 2006 which were covered in the author's China A Guide to Economic and Political Developments 2006 and is the companion volume to Political Developments in Contemporary China A Guide 2010 both published by Routledge

Asian Economies in Transition Richard W. T. Pomfret, 1996 An evaluation of economic transitions from central planning to more market oriented approaches in China Indochina Mongolia Azerbaijan and the Central Asian Republics The data reflects fieldwork done from 1988 to the end of 1994 a vital factor in compiling information since official records do not necessarily reflect accurate figures in these regions Pomfret economics U of Adelaide compares and contrasts the successes and failures of the Chinese and Vietnamese transition models and parallels these concerns with situations in the Former Soviet Union Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR

Economic Developments in Contemporary Russia Ian Jeffries, 2011-03-07 This book provides a comprehensive overview of Russia's difficult economic transition from a command economy since the early 1990s It covers the financial crisis of August 1998 and the global financial crisis a decade later Key subjects covered include economic transition privatization and liberalization changes in land ownership and agriculture energy foreign direct investment economic stabilization and economic performance Russia is well endowed with raw materials especially oil and natural gas this book argues that in some ways this has not helped Russia's attempts to become a more diversified and high tech economy Overall the book demonstrates how much the Russian economy has changed in the period It continues and adds to the overview of developments in the author's The New Russia 2002 and is the companion volume to Political Developments in Contemporary Russia 2011 both published by Routledge

Consistency and Viability of Islamic Economic Systems and the Transition Process J. Marangos, 2013-08-27 Consistency and Viability of Islamic Economics Systems and the Transition Process outlines the transition problem for non market economies and creates an analytic framework for understanding the cause and effect of these economies

Mongolia Ian Jeffries, 2007-03-16 This book provides a full account of the key political and economic events in Mongolia focusing on the period since the establishment of the Soviet backed Mongolian People's Republic in 1924 and the transition towards a democratic free market system since the collapse of the Soviet Union

Journal of Institutional and Theoretical Economics, 2002 World Development Report 1996, 1996 Almost one third of the world's population has embarked on a transition from planned to market economies Like economic reforms elsewhere the long term goal of this transition is to build a thriving market economy capable of delivering long term growth in living standards Now in its 19th annual edition the World Development Report 1996 takes an in depth look at these transition countries focusing on the key lessons that have taken place thus far The introduction to the Report poses a number of key questions that are addressed in later chapters including questions relating to initial challenges and how countries have tackled them from very different starting points and political conditions The Report also focuses on the additional challenges these transition countries face with a final chapter that summarizes the main conclusion of the Report creating a text that will no doubt become the definitive source for students studying international economics and politics

Contemporary North Korea Ian Jeffries, 2009-09-10 This book provides full details of contemporary economic and political developments in North Korea since late 2005 Key topics covered include the succession family visits human rights nuclear capability and intentions recent initiatives in international relations and relations with the United States and adverse economic and social conditions

Journal of Economic Literature, 2002 Issues & Studies, 2003 Demographic Transitions and Economic Miracles in Emerging Asia David E. Bloom, Jeffrey G. Williamson, 1997 The demographic transition a change from high to low rates of mortality and fertility has been more dramatic in East Asia during this century than in any other region or historical period By introducing demographic variables into an empirical model of economic growth this essay shows that this transition has contributed substantially to East Asia's so called economic miracle The miracle occurred in part because East Asia's demographic transition resulted in its working age population growing at a much faster pace than its dependent population during the period 1965-1990 thereby expanding the per capita productive capacity of East Asian economies This effect was not inevitable rather it occurred because East Asian countries had social economic and political institutions and policies that allowed them to realize the growth potential created by the transition. The empirical analyses indicate that population growth has a purely transitional effect on economic growth; this effect operates only when the dependent and working age populations are growing at different rates. An important implication of these results is that future demographic change will tend to depress growth rates in East Asia while it will promote more rapid economic growth in Southeast and South Asia.

The Mongolian Economy F. I. Nixson, 2000. Mongolian and British economists present the first detailed analysis of the shock therapy approach to economic transition that the remote Asian government adopted in 1990. They look at macroeconomic performance, the agriculture and industry sectors, the labor market, and the emerging financial sector from such perspectives as poverty, gender, privatization, and the environment. They find that policy makers have exacerbated the transition process by underestimating its complexity and by pursuing inappropriate or at best overly optimistic policy reforms. The treatment is revised and extended from a volume published in Mongolia in 1999. Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc, Portland, OR.

Road to ASEAN-10; Japanese Perspectives on Economic Integration 1999-2000. This volume of essays by seven Japanese economists and political scientists examines the long term prospects of the ASEAN 10 economies and their relations with major trading partners.

Journal of Cross-cultural Psychology, 2009. Understanding China's Economic Performance Jeffrey Sachs, Wing Thye Woo, 1997. Broadly speaking two schools of thought have emerged to interpret China's rapid growth since 1978: the experimentalist school and the convergence school. The experimentalist school attributes China's successes to the evolutionary, experimental, and incremental nature of China's reforms. Specifically, the resulting non-capitalist institutions are said to be successful in an agriculture where land is not owned by the farmers but by township and village enterprises (TVEs) which are owned collectively by rural communities, and in state-owned enterprises (SOEs) where increased competition and increased wage incentive, not privatization, have been emphasized. The convergence school holds that China's successes are the result of its institutions being allowed to converge with those of non-socialist market economies and that China's economic structure at the start of reforms is a major reason for the fast growth. China had a high population density heavily concentrated in low wage agriculture, which was favorable for labor-intensive export-led growth in other parts of East Asia. The convergence school also holds that China's gradualism results mainly from a lack of consensus over the proper course, with power divided between market reformers and old style socialists, and that the innovative economic circumstances. Perhaps the best test of the two approaches is whether China's policy choices are in fact leading to institutions harmonized with normal market economies or to more distinctive innovations. The recent policy trend has been towards institutional harmonization rather than institutional innovation, suggesting that the government accepts that the ingredients for a dynamic market economy are already well known.
