Environmental Statistics Assessment and Forecasting examines the current efforts to develop a coherent picture of national and regional environmental trends and conditions. The book includes sampling methodologies, statistical analysis techniques, environmental modeling, graphic presentation including geographic information systems (GIS) and the problems involved in forecasting the future. The sampling and statistical techniques discussed include dealing with large variability and soft data, composite sampling methods for combining data, data below the detection level, multivariate data, spatially censored, artificially censored, and incomplete data, kriging and imputation. Geographic information system (GIS) analysis is discussed in the context of database management systems. Also covered are topics involved in the future of environmental statistics including research planning, a bureau of environmental statistics, global interactions, and communication techniques. The book will interest statistical analysts, environmental planners, scientists, regulators, and policy makers in government, industry, and environmental groups.

Ecological Risk Assessment of Contaminated Sediments Christopher G. Ingersoll, Tom Dillon, Gregory R. Biddinger, 1997

Although sediment toxicity, bioaccumulation, testing, and environmental risk assessment (ERA) originated together in the early 1980s, their separate evolution prompted experts from 21 states and 6 countries to integrate sediment quality assessment with ERA during this workshop. By critically evaluating existing approaches, this group of experts identifies principles and practices for sediment ecological risk assessment (SERA) that are designed to improve the scientific and regulatory communities' ability to assess environmental risks associated with contaminated sediments. The authors pinpoint critical applications: product assessment, navigational dredging, site clean up, and pertinent issues: ecological relevance, methodological uncertainty, that address the evaluation of sediments as both a source and a sink for persistent aquatic contaminants.
