Introduction:

At the CTA, we understand there can be bumps in the road and hurdles to navigate when running a community transport organisation. On some occasions, these challenges may not be under your direct control. For example, there could be a situation where a political decision may negatively impact your operations. In scenarios like this, where you may have little or no direct control, you may need to work with external others in campaign for an organisation/individual to address an issue.

CTA has designed this Campaigning Guide with this and similar situations in mind. It will take you through several key areas of campaigning, such as: developing key messages, creating evidence, identifying who to target and how to get your case across.

It aims to support you with private campaign ideas if you find yourself in a position where such actions are necessary.

This guide is designed for England members, particularly the 19th to 19th target sector. However, many areas will also be useful for organisations across the UK.

What is Campaigning?

Campaigning is about an individual or organisation undertaking a series of activities in an organised way to address a shared objective. It is typically undertaken for a political or social purpose. For community transport, this could mean a campaign to the local council to secure funding or make a policy change that makes us using easier. There is no one set way to campaign. Campaigners have been successful through a range of different methods, such as contacting politicians, organising events and protests, conducting surveys, and showcasing through online platforms.

Why Campaign?

There are several reasons that you may engage in campaigning. In some instances, it may be one of the only tools available to influence a decision that is not under your direct control. The reasons for setting up a campaign can differ widely however, there are the commonest and reasons for campaigning, and these include:

- To raise awareness of an issue or topic
- To change something which may be causing a problem
- To stop or change from happening, and if that has negative consequences

It has examples in the context of community transport needs include:

- Raising awareness of the services community transport delivers in the area and encouraging this support with the local transport authority to encourage services, which is often their 'natural' state
- Campaigning with authority against Community Transport budget cuts imposed by a local authority that may have had other services being
