

Lunch for Frogs

On a humid sunny afternoon in August, two frogs named _____ and _____ were sitting on a log watching their six frog friends jump in and out of the water. They noticed there were three times as many insects flying around, as there were frogs. The two frogs did a quick math equation and learned there were enough flying insects for every frog in the pond to each have three insects for lunch. So they told their six friends, _____ and _____ (write the names from the previous lines here) jumped from their log and joined their friends in chasing and eating the flying insects. Each frog was smiling because their tummies were full, soon all the frogs were napping in the sun.

Use the number chosen above to find your answer.

** Show your work and solution here. Discuss your strategies used in completing the problem. If time allows, draw an illustration of your problem solving strategies (use the back of this paper).

1. Write the two math equations the two frogs used to determine the amount of flying insects each frog could eat?
2. If the amount of frogs doubled, how many frog would be at the pond?
3. How many more flying insects would need to visit the pond so each frog could eat five flying insects?
