

Symbolic Map: Night by Elie Wiesel

"Never shall I forget that night, the first night in camp, that turned my life into one long night seven times sealed."

Images
The author's description of the night in the camp is a powerful metaphor for the Holocaust. The night is described as a long, dark, and terrifying experience that is repeated seven times, symbolizing the seven days of the week. The night is a time of suffering, loss, and despair, and it is a time when the author's faith in God is shaken. The night is a time when the author is separated from his family and friends, and he is forced to live in a place of constant fear and uncertainty. The night is a time when the author is stripped of his identity and his humanity, and he is reduced to a mere number. The night is a time when the author is forced to witness the suffering of others, and he is forced to confront the reality of the Holocaust. The night is a time when the author is forced to question his faith and his beliefs, and he is forced to search for meaning in a world that has become so dark and so full of pain.
