Affect and Emotion in Multi-Religious Secular Societies Christian von Scheve, Anna Berg, Meike Haken, Nur Ural, 2019-09-16 Emotions have moved center stage in many contemporary debates over religious diversity and multicultural recognition. As in other contested fields, emotions are often one-sidedly discussed as quintessentially subjective and individual phenomena, neglecting their social and cultural constitution. Moreover, emotionality in these debates is frequently attributed to the religious subject alone, disregarding the affective anatomy of the secular. This volume addresses these shortcomings, bringing into conversation a variety of disciplinary perspectives on religious and secular affect and emotion. The volume emphasizes two analytical perspectives: on the one hand, chapters take an immanent perspective focusing on subjective feelings and emotions in relation to the religious and the secular; on the other hand, chapters take a relational perspective looking at the role of affect and emotion in how the religious and the secular constitute one another. These perspectives cut across the three main parts of the volume: the first one addressing historical intertwinements of religion and emotion; the second part emphasizing affects, emotions, and religiosity; and the third part looking at specific sensibilities of the secular. The thirteen chapters provide a well-balanced composition of theoretical, methodological, and empirical approaches to these areas of inquiry, discussing both historical and contemporary cases.

Step Scenes of Life Dudley (Chris) Christian, 2017-05-13 Come look at all the captured steps which I've tried to lay out so you better would see the pictures, though in words, which makes one small togetherness bringing us in a same time and space so we can share our deeper philosophies as our paths in our lives did intermix. So different yet so much alike we lived and live still to walk along and let us note the how much alike we are or were in passing thru. So take any title and think back to that subjected time, place, or day and smile, yes smile, you will you must, you need to for to capture and relive our memories that is all we keep through our passages of time. This book is just one part of a series of poetry books by this author who was born in Trinidad, raised in Cayman, and after a three-year adventure of world travelling while working deep sea, immigrated to Canada. Herein you will find pages which contain prose about the unexpected bumps of life, the joys of the smoother rides, and the deep tears that can only come from loving.

Of Seasons and Moods: Poetry I Left Behind the Times Beldon Baxter, 2019-10-15 Merriam Press Poetry Series Are these really poems left behind the times? Very definitely. They just don't seem at one with today's quotidian media frantic app, this app that obsessions so much in our foreground now. Grabbing at the moment, being in the moment, has much to do here with nature and its appeal. Nature's so often the subject of the author's poetry in this tome and despite the terribly intrusive, addictive media foreground, nature remains a very different realm and still an important one. Is this poetry somehow supposed to help preserve nature and animals? No, it obviously can't. Come with the author as he celebrates in rhyme what touched him through a variety of moods and seasons. Perhaps some of these will evoke similar feelings in you.

Translating National Allegories Alistair Rolls,John West-Sooby,Marie-Laure Vuaille-Barcan,2019-04-15 This book explores the intersection of a number of academic areas of study that are all individually of growing importance translation studies crime fiction and world literature The scholars included here are leaders in one or more of these areas The frame of this volume is imagological its focus is on the ways in which national allegories are constructed and deconstructed encompassing descriptions of national characteristics as they play out at the level of the local or the individual as well as broader political analyses Its corpus crime fiction is shown to be a privileged site for writing the national narrative and often in ways that are more complex and dynamic than is suggested by the genre s much cited role as vehicle for a new realism Finally these two areas are problematised through the lens of translation which is a crucial player in both the development of crime fiction and the formation rather than simply the interlingual transfer of national allegory In this volume national allegories and the crime novels in which they emerge are shown to be eminently versatile foundationally plural texts that promote critical rewriting as opposed to sites for fixing meaning This book was originally published as a special issue of The Translator
