Freedom To Invent The Incentive To Creativity:

Freedom to Invent Edwin W. Oldham, 2005 Ned Oldham's intriguing account of the history and how to of inventing reflects the enduring truth of Jefferson's adage that our great and free nation has served as a springboard for much of the technological progress that has transformed the world since his time Oldham applies his thirty five years as one of our country's most successful patent attorneys to his story of the Big Ideas of our time The pride of American purpose is evident throughout these histories So are the old adages as refracted through the lens of his story the value of perseverance the merits of concentrated and enduring effort and the virtues of a system that channels private ambition into public good allowing creative brilliance to flourish Gowers Review of Intellectual Property Andrew Gowers, Great Britain: H.M.

Treasury, 2006-12-06 This report examines the importance of intellectual property IP ranging from patents copyright design and trade marks and whether in the age of globalization digitization and increasing economic specialization it still creates incentives for innovation without unduly limiting access to consumers and stifling further innovation The report does recommend a radical overhaul of the system with the review concentrating on three areas and setting out the following recommendations i strengthening enforcement of IP rights whether through clamping down on piracy or trade in counterfeit goods ii reducing costs of registering and litigating IP rights for businesses large and small iii improving the balance and flexibility of IP rights to allow individuals businesses and institutions to use content in ways consistent with the digital age
