Potlatch as Pedagogy Sara Florence Davidson, Robert Davidson, 2018-10-19

In 1884 the Canadian government enacted a ban on the potlatch the foundational ceremony of the Haida people The tradition which determined social structure transmitted cultural knowledge and redistributed wealth was seen as a cultural impediment to the government's aim of assimilation The tradition did not die however the knowledge of the ceremony was kept alive by the Elders through other events until the ban was lifted In 1969 a potlatch was held The occasion the raising of a totem pole carved by Robert Davidson the first the community had seen in close to 80 years From then on the community publicly reclaimed from the Elders who remained to share it the knowledge that has almost been lost Sara Florence Davidson Robert's daughter would become an educator Over the course of her own education she came to see how the traditions of the Haida practiced by her father holistic built on relationships practical and continuous could be integrated into contemporary educational practices From this realization came the roots for this book

Irreconcilable Joseph Weiss, 2026-03-24 Since the early 2000s the Canadian government has attempted reconciliation with Indigenous Nations through varied efforts treaty processes government commissions rebranding campaigns for settler owned businesses workshops for state and local officials school curriculum changes and a recently christened national holiday However Joseph Weiss argues these state driven initiatives reinforce Indigenous subordination to the settler state This incisive study of the varied responses from both Indigenous Nations and individuals illuminates how reconciliation is implicated in ongoing colonial erasure Critically engaging with a variety of fields including Indigenous studies anthropology history political theory semiotics and museum studies Weiss captures the multiple scales at which these contested dynamics unfold and explores their underlying technologies of erasure Irreconcilable unpacks how reconciliation offers amends for anti Indigenous violence while disavowing responsibility for that violence and argues that settler promises of reconciliation cannot be reconciled to the fact of Indigenous sovereignty Nevertheless Weiss illustrates how Indigenous Peoples refuse erasure at every turn instead building alternate futures and lived worlds that are not always already colonially overdetermined

To the Charlottes George Mercer Dawson, 1993 Haida Gwaii the Queen Charlotte Islands were still relatively untouched by European exploration when in the summer of 1878 a young geologist name George Dawson arrived there on behalf of the Geological Survey of Canada Separated from the mainland by many kilometres of water the islands had retained a distinct ecological and cultural environment that reflected millennia of isolation They were at the time that Dawson visited them home to many rare species of plants and animals as well as to the unique culture of the Haida people One of the most remarkable scientists and explorers of his time Dawson drew maps collected fossil plant and insect specimens and investigated the ethnology of the Native people His interest in Native culture is readily apparent in his personal reports and private journals and he collected artifacts and took photographs which are well known for their early depictions of Haida villages and architecture Yet what is most amazing is that he accomplished all this despite being physically challenged by the debilitating effects of a childhood illness This edition of Dawson s 1878 exploration of the Queen Charlotte Islands includes a reprint of Dawson s report On the Haida Indians of the Queen Charlotte Islands as well as numerous photographs taken by Dawson during his explorations The text of the 1878 journal is meticulously annotated by editors Cole and Lockner who also provide an informative introduction which includes biographical scientific and ethnological details A HAIDA
