Fields, 2014 This is the first book length study of why states sometimes ignore oppose or undermine elements of the nuclear nonproliferation regime even as they formally support it These essays show that success must be measured not only by how many states join the effort but also by how they participate once they join Governing Globalization Deepak Nayyar, 2002-07-18 It is now more than fifty years since the United Nations system and the Bretton Woods institutions were created The world has changed since then and so have its governance needs in terms of institutions and rules It is time to think about the contours of institutions and governance that would meet the needs of the world economy and also polity at least for the first quarter of the twenty first century This book is among the first to examine the subject in depth The study is divided into four parts The first situates the subject in the wider context of globalization which has shaped development in the world economy affected the living conditions of people and constrained the role of nation states The international context and the national setting are explored The second part analyses some issues of emerging significance in the contemporary world such as global macroeconomic management transnational corporations international capital flows and cross border movements of people to suggest that there are some missing institutions which are needed The third part provides a critical evaluation of the existing institutions in retrospect with a focus on the UN the IMF the World Bank and the WTO It analyses how existing rules need to be modified or existing institutions need to be restructured to meet the present and future needs of global governance The fourth part explores some important elements of governance which are critical for any vision of the future It suggests some changes in existing institutions and points to emerging governance needs where new institutions may have to be created This authoritative volume will be of value to readers with an interest in international economics development economics and international relations It will also be of value to practitioners both policy makers and diplomats concerned with problems of global governance and should become the standard reference on the subject Teaching for Social Justice and Sustainable Development Across the Primary Curriculum Anne Marie Kavanagh, Fionnuala Waldron, Benjamin Mallon, 2021-03-21 This volume supports educators in integrating meaningful education for social justice and sustainability across a wide range of curricular subjects by drawing on educational theory innovative pedagogical approaches and creative ideas for teaching and learning Both practical and theoretical in its approach it addresses subject areas ranging from mathematics to visual arts to language teaching Chapters provide subject entry points for teachers seeking to embed social justice and sustainability principles and pedagogies into their work Transferable across various areas of learning a range of pedagogical approaches are exemplified ranging from inquiry approaches to ethical dilemmas to critical relational pedagogies Ready to use teaching exemplars activities and resources address issues which are of interest and relevance to children s lives including gender stereotyping racism heterosexism climate change and species extinction Practical guidance is provided on how to engage children in dialogue and reflection on these complex issues in a safe and ethical way This accessible and unique volume is essential reading for student teachers teachers educational leaders teacher educators and anyone interested in inspiring children to work towards creating a more socially just and sustainable world

Collective Action at Local and Global Scales David G. Victor,2014 As we approach the twenty year anniversary of Keohane and Ostrom s Local Commons and Global Interdependence I assess their agenda for collaboration between scholars working in the local and global domains I use the case of global climate change a challenge that intrinsically spans local to global collective action to emphasize what scholars working at the intersection of these two domains have learned over the last two decades and what we might do next Issues that were ripe twenty years ago such as studying the effects of numbers of actors and their heterogeneity have seen substantial progress New topics for cross domain research include a more careful look at how collective action affects technological innovation They also include the study of how fragmented institutions affect collective action fragmentation has grown as a research topic in both domains yet described with different terms of polycentrism and regime complexes This paper is part of a panel at APSA aimed at reviving the Keohane Ostrom I suggest that a shift to these new topics is as important as a revival of interest in collaboration in these two domains
