Global Communications Since 1844 Peter J. Hugill, 1999-04-09 In World Trade since 1431 Peter Hugill showed how the interplay of technology and geography guided the evolution of the modern global capitalistic system Now in the successor to that widely acclaimed book Hugill shifts the focus to telecommunications once again demonstrating that those nations that best developed and marketed new technologies were the nations that rose to world power Beginning with the advent of the telegraph in the 1840s Hugill shows how each major change in transportation and communications technologies brought about a corresponding transformation from one world economy to another British advances in international telegraphy after the American Civil War for example kept that nation just ahead of the United States in the communications race a position it held until 1945 Hugill explains how such developments as aerial bombardment of cities in World War I spurred the development of radio and ultimately radar He also traces the steps that led to the British surrender of world hegemony to the United States at the end of World War II

Cultures and Politics of Global Communication: Volume 34, Review of International Studies Costas M. Constantinou, Oliver P. Richmond, Alison Watson, 2008-06-12 This special issue of Review of International Studies focuses on how International Relations IR communicates with the world and vice versa It opens up the discussion of the politics of communication within the discipline and beyond With a variety of different mediums ranging from media film memory music culture and emotions this book seeks to accentuate their importance for IR both as a source of knowledge and as an ideational exchange which shapes IR It examines the diverse ways that multidisciplinary thinkers try to understand and explain global routes mobilities cultures commodifications singularities discourses and aestheticisations This special issue specifically addresses three interrelated themes How international and global studies approach the question of communication how to conceptualise and respond to the globalisation of communication and how global problems get communicated within and across the institutional settings of the epistemic disciplines in general and the IR discipline in particular

International Communication and Globalization Ali Mohammadi, 1997-09-15 Addressing the impact on national societies and cultures of the headlong rate of change in communication between nations the contributors offer new approaches to this complex and rapidly growing field The ethics of global communication are discussed

The Journal of International Communication, 2007

Comparing Media from Around the World Robert McKenzie, 2006 Featuring an innovative organization and in depth research Comparing Media from Around the World discusses how media systems are similar and different across the globe This book discusses the fundamental elements of media systems and shows how they are used in eight sample countries Unlike other books it is organized according to media elements with comparative discussions of all eight countries within each chapter This helps readers make connections and comparisons between the countries and allows them to apply the concepts to other countries not discussed in the book Comparing Media from Around the World also features exciting photographs from the sample countries showing not only the media but how they are experienced in context for example a newspaper stand in France and an internet cafe in Ghana

Telecommunications, Electronic Media, and Global Communications Christopher H. Sterling, 1996

Cities in a Global Society Richard Victor Knight, Gary Gappert, 1989-08

Cities in a Global Society is an impressive collection of essays focused on an important global redefinition. Go Global is a rapidly emerging theme of the 1990s and this book is the definitive overview of cities that are doing so. Michael Marien, Editor, Future Survey. This is one of the most significant public policy books to appear. In essay after essay this important volume makes clear a simple idea: That the culture, environment, and economy of cities are increasingly influenced by forces well beyond the end of Main Street. Bulletin of Municipal Foreign Policy. As the year 2000 approaches, urbanized areas are entering a new era, one in which they will be shaped primarily by their responses to powerful global forces. The editors and contributors to this fascinating and timely volume believe that cities must begin to assess their roles in a global society and establish their strategic position and comparative advantage in the global marketplace. A wide range of essays by noted international scholars shows how national urban policies tend to be reactive, driven by problems rather than by opportunities, consequently reinforcing the passive nature of cities and their dependency on national initiatives. The diversity of their perspectives, analyses, observations, and insights helps to identify and define critical issues that cities are beginning to address as they become more internationally oriented. After first examining the role of cities in society, the contributors present several perspectives on a city's future, management model, and review strategies for developing global cities. This stimulating volume offers a wide range of innovative responses to these new challenges and will be useful to professionals and students in urban studies, economics, development studies, anthropology, international relations, future studies, political science, political theory, and sociology.

ILSA Journal of International & Comparative Law, 2000

Cultural Autonomy in Global Communications Cees J. Hamelink, 1983. The prescriptions found in Cees Hamelink's book collide frontally with the vital interests of the transnational corporate system. In his plea for cultural dissociation, Hamelink urges that nations seeking sovereignty and independent development sever as many as possible of their links, especially cultural and informational ones, with transnational corporate chains.
